

June 7, 2013

Emmy's, the zoo and more...

The Emmy Nominees were put to the vote and decisions announced last weekend in Cleveland.

Although the Young Stars of Ballet that Indianapolis City Ballet and WFYI-Public Television produced didn't claim the top prize, it is a great honor and boost to the film to have the recognition of an Emmy Nomination as it moves toward national broadcast. We should mention that the Emmy judges did give the big prize to Indianapolis City Ballet's Vice-Chairman Jane Fortune for her film Invisible Women! (We were not competing in the same category, Fortune-ately) - Bravo Jane!

So what does one do to cure the Emmy blues?

Indianapolis City Ballet took a trip to the Indianapolis Zoo.

Ballerina Veronika Verterich got to talk to the animals, dance with them even - flamingos, dolphins, giraffes, a macaw, a tiger and Aurora, the 1,300 pound Walrus - all up close.

Images from this incredible day made possible by the Indy Zoo can be seen on Indianapolis City Ballet's Facebook page.

